EL PASO, Texas (November 19, 2006) — He was last, but certainly not least, as Kentucky’s Andy Winings took top honors at the Titleist Long Drive Contest and Oklahoma State’s Jonathan Moore aced the final hole of the PING Putting Contest to take the title at the 2006 Western Refining College All-America Golf Classic held at El Paso Country Club on Sunday.

Winings, a 5-10 senior from Brownsburg, Ind., launched his final drive 337 yards amidst just a slight breeze. Coastal Carolina’s Dustin Johnson held the lead most of the day with his launch of 335 yards early on, but that would end up second best on Sunday. Winings was the 28th and final competitor of the day. Georgia’s Chris Kirk finished third with a distance of 328 yards.

In the PING Putting Contest, Moore aced the final hole of the event to card a 24 on the nine-hole course. Moore finished one shot ahead of Vanderbilt’s Luke List and Arizona’s Travis Esway. Defending PING putting champion Dawie Van der Walt finished a tied for fourth.
